Jérôme joined Miller Thomson's construction law team in September 2023, after completing his articles with the firm. He specializes in disputes related to construction and commercial law, bringing an innovative approach to each case. His passion for the law and ability to develop creative solutions are significant assets for his clients.

During his studies, Jérôme served as editor-in-chief of Le Pigeon dissident, the Faculty of Law's student newspaper, which enhanced his writing skills and commitment to his profession. His talent and involvement have significantly marked his academic career.

Holding a Bachelor of Laws from the Université de Montréal (class of 2022) Jérôme combines solid training with exemplary dedication, making him a promising lawyer in construction litigation. His strategic insight and expertise enable him to effectively resolve his clients' complex legal challenges.
