Kelsey Sherriff runs a robust commercial litigation practice with a focus on class actions and estates and trust litigation. She skillfully handles a range of cases, including environmental, privacy and products liability class action defence; wills variation and other estate challenges; health law matters; and contractual disputes. Kelsey's proactive engagement during law school and her stint as a clerk at the British Columbia Supreme Court showcase her dedication to the legal field. Notably, she actively leads initiatives at Miller Thomson Vancouver, underscoring her commitment to women's leadership and pro bono work.

Kelsey has presented notable works at various legal conferences and publications, emphasizing her knowledge and experience in areas like class actions, organ donation consent, tax law, climate change legislation, and more. Her diverse and insightful contributions underscore her deep knowledge and commitment to the legal profession.

Kelsey has garnered recognition for her exceptional legal acumen being, with rankings in several prestigious directories, including The Best Lawyers in Canada and The Canadian Legal Lexpert Directory. Her well-deserved commendations, such as being titled a Future Star in Benchmark Canada, highlight her prowess in corporate and commercial litigation.
